Student A: Marketing Director

You are the Marketing Director at Interlink International, a company that operates mobile phone networks. You will receive a call from a colleague about an important meeting next month. The agenda of the meeting is:

- 1 Market opportunities: Africa 2 Pricing policy 3 Senior management vacancies

Receive a call from the Operations Director of your company and discuss the meeting. First look at these notes for each agenda item:

- 1 Market opportunities: Africa
Try to persuade your colleague that developing new markets in Africa is vital for the success of your company.
- 2 Pricing policy
Try to persuade your colleague that your company should reduce the price of its products to gain market share.
- 3 Senior management vacancies
You have heard that the current Vice-President for Marketing in your company is going to retire soon. Does your colleague know if this is true? You would like the job, so try to persuade your colleague to say something positive about you the next time he/she is talking to the President of the company.

Student B: Operations Director

Make a call to the Marketing Director of your company and discuss the meeting. First look at these notes for each agenda item:

You are the Operations Director at Interlink International, a company that operates mobile phone networks. You will call from a colleague about an important meeting next month. The agenda of the meeting is:

- 1 Market opportunities: Africa 2 Pricing policy 3 Senior management vacancies

- 1 Market opportunities: Africa
Try to persuade your colleague that it is too risky and too expensive to develop new markets in Africa at the moment.
- 2 Pricing policy
Try to persuade your colleague that your company should keep the price of its products the same for the next 12 months. You have a good reputation in the market and there is no need to cut prices.
- 3 Senior management vacancies
You have heard that the current Vice-President for Operations in your company is going to retire soon. Does your colleague know if this is true? You would like the job, so try to persuade your colleague to say something positive about you the next time he/she is talking to the President of the company.
