

1.1

Introductions

A Think of possible replies to these introductions. It is the first meeting.

- 1 How do you do.
- 2 Pleased to meet you. My name is Doktor Strauss.
- 3 Hello, my name's Susan – Susan Atkins.
- 4 I'm sorry, I didn't catch your name.

B In the dialogue below there are three people. The host knows both Student B and Student C and introduces them to each other. Practise a similar dialogue, using your real names and jobs.

Host: Student B, have you met Student C?

Student B: No, I don't think so.

Host: I know Student C from Beijing. We've done a lot of work together.

Student B: Really? Nice to meet you, Student C.

Student C: Nice to meet you too.

Student B: So, Student C, what do you do in Beijing?

Student C: I'm responsible for handling key accounts in a large advertising agency. And you?

Student B: _____

C Walk around. Introduce yourself to other people and introduce people to each other.

D When a visitor comes to your office you introduce yourselves then make some 'small talk' to create a friendly atmosphere. Write replies to the questions below. Add an example of your own.

1 May I take your coat? Please, have a seat.

Oh, thanks.

2 Would you like a drink?

3 White or black?

4 Did you have any problems getting here?

5 So, how was the weather in ... (Sao Paulo)?

6 Is this your first visit to ... (France)?

7 How long are you here for?

8

E Work with a new partner: decide who is the host and who is the visitor. The visitor has just arrived from his/her country and knocks on the host's office door. Make small talk together and stop when the business discussion begins:

Host: Shall we get down to business?

Visitor: As you know, I'm here because