

Presentations Style Sample

Unit 3: Plan a Clear Presentation

This sample checks the current reference DOCX through the standard text-maker markdown-to-docx pipeline. It is not a final textbook page.

Core Skill: Choose the Structure That Fits the Job

Different workplace purposes need different structures. A simple list is often not enough because it may not show the relationship between points.

A clear structure helps the audience understand why each point matters, how the points connect, and what they should do next.

Useful Structures

The table below shows several structure choices from the unit.

Purpose	Useful Structure	Best When You Need To...
Recommend a change	Problem - cause - solution - action	Explain why change is needed
Ask for a decision	Situation - options - criteria - recommendation	Compare choices clearly
Report progress	Objective - current status - issue - next step	Update a team or manager

Practice Task 1: Match the Structure to the Purpose

Read each situation. Choose the structure that will make the presentation easiest to follow.

1. Explain the current situation.
2. Compare the available options.
3. Recommend one option.
 - Explain the strongest reason.
 - Mention the main risk.
4. Ask for the decision you need.

Speaking Task: Explain Your Main Message

Use the phrases below to prepare a short spoken explanation.

Useful language:

- The main issue is...
- The best option is...
- The reason I recommend this is...

Learner Deliverable

By the end of this unit, write a short planning map for a real or realistic presentation from your workplace.

Model:

Today, I will explain why our team should test one shared order-status log for four weeks.

Good morning. Today, I will explain the problem, show the cause, recommend a short pilot, and ask for one decision.

Keep the slide simple. Put the detailed explanation in your spoken English, not on the slide.

Do not include confidential client names, employee names, or unreleased business figures in a classroom presentation.

If you use AI to check your grammar, read the result carefully. Make sure the final language still sounds like your own English.

Reflection: Which part of your presentation needs a clearer example?

Planning Table

Complete this table before you draft your slides.

Planning Area	Your Notes
Audience
Audience outcome
Core message
Best structure
Summary of key points
Action, decision, or close

Figure note: This sample uses placeholder classroom content.

See also: Unit 7 for visual design and slide-content choices.